Dear State Medicaid Director:

This letter is one of a series that provides guidance on the implementation of the Balanced Budget Act.

We are writing to provide you information on section 4733 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (BBA), which is designed to provide Medicaid eligibility to disabled working individuals who, because of relatively high earnings, cannot qualify for Medicaid under one of the other statutory provisions under which disabled working individuals may be eligible for medical assistance.

While Medicaid is designed primarily to cover individuals with limited income and resources, current law provides for continued Medicaid coverage for working disabled individuals with incomes above the normal income standards. Specifically, under

- Section 1619(a) of the Social Security Act, individuals can continue to receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and Medicaid even if their earned income exceeds the "substantial gainful activity" (SGA) limit of $500 a month; and
- Sections 1619(b) and 1905(q) of the Social Security Act, individuals whose earned income exceeds the maximum amount that will permit payment of an SSI benefit can still receive Medicaid (but not SSI) if they continue to be disabled, meet all other non-disability SSI requirements except for earned income, need Medicaid to continue working, and do not have sufficient income to replace the value of the SSI benefits and the Medicaid benefits they would lose. The amount of income this represents varies from State to State and year to year, but is much higher than the income standards normally applied to Medicaid. The range is from about $12,000 to over $32,000 a year. However, individualized calculations can be made in certain instances.

While many persons with disabilities fall within the income levels for eligibility under one of the programs described above, more persons with disabilities may increase their earnings or consider returning to work if they are assured of continued Medicaid coverage beyond the 1619(b) maximums. Because they are disabled and usually have high medical expenses, and often use long-term support services available under Medicaid, they often do not have access to private health insurance coverage, whether through an employer or direct purchase from an insurer. Without access to private health insurance or Medicaid, these individuals, who are estimated to number very few, often cannot afford to pay for their medical care. Under this circumstance, their only alternative may be to stop working, or reduce their work effort, thus reducing their income to a point where they again become eligible for Medicaid.

Section 4733 of BBA allows States to provide Medicaid to these individuals by creating a new optional categorically needy eligibility group. If a State chooses to cover this group, individuals can become eligible for Medicaid if:

- they are in a family whose income is less than 250 percent of the federal poverty level for a family of the size involved; and
- except for their earned income, they would be considered to be receiving SSI benefits.

Section 4733 also provides that States can require individuals to pay such premiums or other cost-sharing charges, set on a sliding scale based on income, as the State may determine. The amount of the premium or other cost-sharing to be paid, if any, is entirely within each State's discretion. Section 4733 does not require a premium or cost-sharing charges.

This provision is now in effect. We are developing a State Medicaid Manual instruction related to coverage of this group. States wishing to cover this group should submit a Medicaid State Plan amendment so indicating to their HCFA Regional Office. The amendment should indicate that the State covers this optional categorically needy group and the effective date of the amendment, and should include information on the premiums and cost-sharing charges the State plans to impose.

Enclosed is an explanation of how eligibility is determined for this group.

Any questions about this provision or this letter should be directed to Roy Trudel of my staff at (410) 786-3417.

Sincerely,

Sally K. Richardson

Determining Eligibility for Individuals Under Section 4733 of BBA

The eligibility determination for individuals in this group is essentially a sequential two-step process.

1. The first step is a gross income test, based on the family's total combined income, including all earnings. The family's total combined income must be less than 250 percent of the federal poverty level for a family of the size involved. Family income is determined without deductions or exemptions, except for types of income generally excluded under laws other than the Social Security Act; e.g., Agent Orange payments, certain reparations payments, various payments to Native Americans, etc. If the family's income is equal to or exceeds 250 percent of the appropriate poverty level, the individual is not eligible for Medicaid under this provision.

It is up to the State to determine what constitutes a "family" in the context of this provision.

2. Assuming the individual has met the gross income test, the second step is a determination of whether he or she meets the disability, assets, and unearned income standards to receive an SSI benefit. Income of other family members used in Step 1 is not included (unless the individual has an ineligible spouse whose income is subject to the SSI deeming rules). To be eligible under this provision, the individual must meet all SSI eligibility criteria (including categorical requirements).

SSI methodologies are used in making this determination except that all earned income received by the individual is disregarded. The individual's countable unearned income (e.g., title II disability benefits) must be less than the SSI income standard (in 1997, $484 for an individual). If unearned income equals or exceeds the SSI income standard, the individual is not eligible for Medicaid under this provision.

The individual's countable resources must be equal to or less than the SSI resource standard ($2,000 for an individual).

There is no requirement that the individual must at one time have been an SSI recipient to be eligible under this provision. However, if the individual was not an SSI recipient, you must do a disability determination to ensure that the individual would meet the eligibility requirements for SSI.
